SINGAPURA — THE LION CITY

Singapore is taken from the Sanskrit word, "Singapura"—meaning, "Lion City."

East meets West in this melting pot of the East, which, just a century ago, was only a Malay fishing village. It was acquired by treaty in 1819 from the Johore Malay Sultan.

The architect of this far-sighted stroke of Empire building was Thomas Stamford Raffles, who at once saw in this, then uninviting, swampy and malarial island, a rich and strategic outpost of the future. Raffles chose this island to be the centre of trade for the East Indies in preference to any of the prosperous trading stations in Sumatra. He gained his point in the face of bitter opposition from the politically powerful East India Company, then the premier trading Company of the world.

The name of Raffles is now revered among England's great leaders of the past for today, Singapore, with nearly a million inhabitants, has justified the faith of its founder.

With a hinterland rich in tin and rubber, important dollars earning commodities, this "Clapham Junction of the East," has already claimed her premier position among the islands of the fabulously wealthy East Indies.

WHERE TO STAY

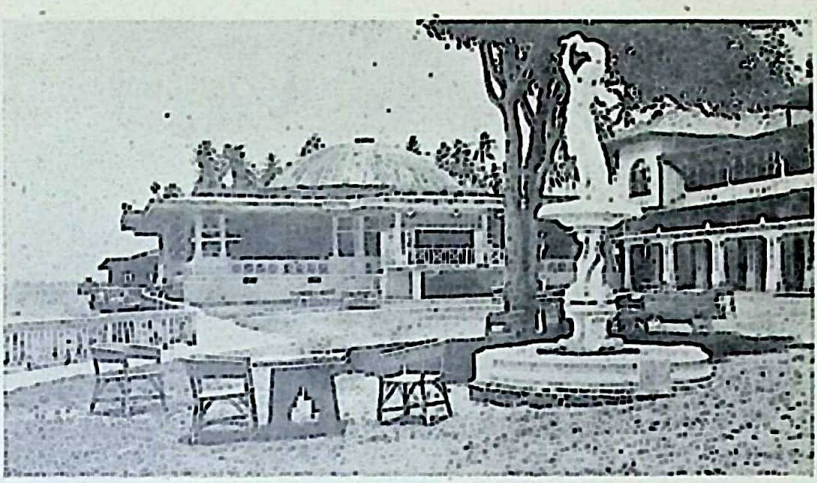
Having arrived here, the first problem is that of accommodation. Solution can be found in a number of first-rate hotels.

RAFFLES HOTEL, in Beach Road, with its world-wide reputation, has comfortable accommodation and good cuisine. It is situated but a few minutes' walk from the business centre of the island. It features a delightful Palm Court with its open-air concerts at nights, and a spacious ballroom with an excellent orchestra. Raffles is a favourite rendezvous of Singapore residents.

RAFFLES HOTEL

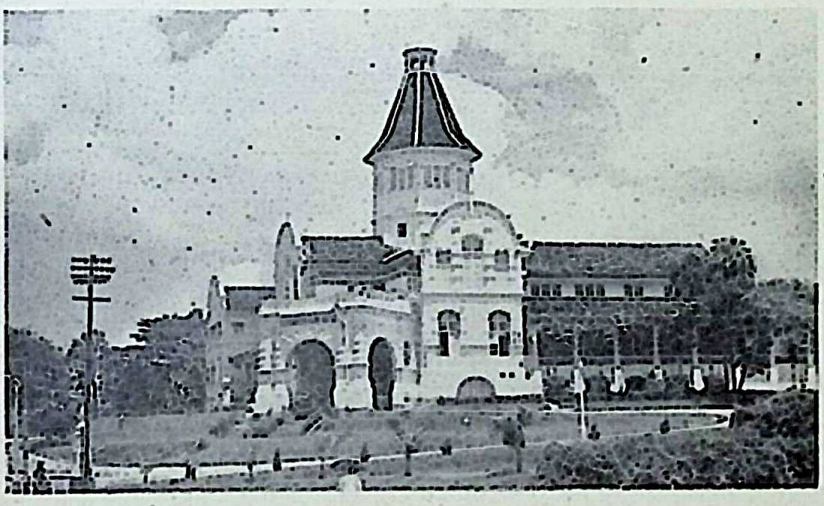
ADELPHI HOTEL, in Coleman Street, facing St. Andrew's Cathedral; offers comfortable single and double bedrooms. A roof-garden and cocktail lounge-bar are added attractions. The Adelphi is especially popular with business and professional men.

Koviloor Acadamy



SEA VIEW HOTEL

SEA VIEW HOTEL, in Meyer Road, faces the sea. Although only four miles out of the town, it is completely free from the hustle and dust of the city. In addition to airy rooms, it has a domed ballroom with an orchestra providing light and dance music.



GOODWOOD PARK HOTEL

Koviloor Acadamy

GOODWOOD PARK HOTEL, in Scotts Road, is ideally situated on a hill overlooking a terrace-garden and tennis courts for its guests. It offers single and double bedrooms and flats.

KATONG REST HOUSE, 107, Marine Parade, is right on the sea coast. Double and single accommodation can be obtained, and both Western and Oriental meals are provided.

THE TAVERN, 7 & 17, Tanglin Road, a popular rendezvous, serves good meals and offers comfortable accommodation.

MAJESTIC HOTEL, 31/37, Bukit Pasoh Road, is noted for its cuisine and accommodation.

GRAND HOTEL, in Karikal Road, is restful and faces the sea. It has large grounds and offers good swimming.

EASTERN HOTEL, in 21, Tyrwhitt Road, has spacious rooms and provides good food.

The Classified advertisements' columns of the newspapers offer alternative accommodation in boarding houses and private homes.

WHERE TO EAT

Sightseeing has manifold advantages no doubt, but there must be breaks in between when one can relax over a drink, or if your appetite calls for it, a hearty meal.

Singapore has many bright restaurants where all tastes can be satisfied. The cosy atmosphere of G.H. Cafe is a rendezvous for many, especially around eleven in the mornings. G.H. serves a tasty and fanciful variety of cakes and warm curry-puffs to go with their beers and whisky-sodas.

John Little's and Robinson's both possess smart restaurants over their departmental establishments. Grills and typical English menus are their specialities.

Situated in High Street, is the Cafe de Luxe where you can have your pick of some well-cooked European and Chinese dishes. You have probably heard of fried rice—"nasi goreng"—well, you can buy a steaming hot delicious dish at the de Luxe.

Ice-cream is always popular in a warm climate and is served in almost all restaurants. Ice-cream shops catering only for the ice-cream lover are also numerous and are to be found in and around Raffles Place, High Street and North Bridge Road.

Koviloor Acadamy

If you are on the prowl for ice-cream look out for the 'Magnolia' sign-board along the roads mentioned. Here, not only will you be able to satisfy your yen for ice-cream served up in all manner of names, shades and mixtures, but will be able to obtain 'Hot Dogs' and decks of sandwiches.

If the heat is too oppressive and you feel that you just cannot look at food until you cool off, the Cathay Restaurant is the place you are looking for. This Restaurant is air-conditioned and serves food for the most discerning palate.

The Pavilion Restaurant, in Orchard Road, where Satay to Russian Caviar is served up by experts in the culinary business, assures you of a good luncheon or dinner. The atmosphere is spick and span without a too obvious application of polish. A happy landing place for gourmets.

The menus of the Capitol Restaurant are hard to beat, as they are not only well-balanced but planned to please the palate. Curry tiffins are a speciality of theirs.

If you are a tourist with a determination to taste Eastern dishes visit the Southern Hotel in Eu Tong Sen Street in the heart of China town and enjoy such dishes as edible bird's nest, savoury soups, shark's fins, stuffed chicken, and an almost bewildering list of other delicacies, made as only the Chinese know how.

Mosque at North Bridge Road

Koviloor Acadamy

Under the shadow of the Mosque in North Bridge Road, is the Islamic Restaurant where crispy pancakes made out of unleavened bread is served with a spicy pidgeon curry, a speciality of the Muslim. It is well worth trying this if your palate can stand strongly flavoured and spicy sauces.

For the unconventional who like to go "slumming," Hokien Street at night with its brightly-lit stalls along the sides of the street, provides the most appetising Hokien Mee (noodles boiled and flavoured with prawns, vegetable and spices in a tasty cup of soup). You eat at the stalls with chopsticks and it is fun.

Albert Street, near the Rex Cinema, is another famous night haunt for those who want Chinese and Indian food. Here it is advisable to have a Chinese friend as a table companion to recommend the best dishes and how to eat them.

Satay is spoken of with relish among the communities here. The dish consists of pieces of meat grilled with spice and skewered in thin sticks and is eaten with rice cakes, cucumber and onions, and peanut curry. The Satay Club next to the Alhambra Theatre, Beach Road, is a famous spot for satay-eaters.

If you are not Bohemian-minded and eating in the street does not appeal to you, go to the Bandeong Restaurant in Tanglin Road where you will get tasty Indonesian dishes served at tables.

The Singapore Restaurant in Bras Basah Road is one of the few restaurants that serves both Eastern and European dishes with equal success. A long menu card gives you a wide range.

For excellent mixed grills visit the Stamford Cafe in Bras Basah Road.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Singapore with its many departmental stores and shops, stocked to repletion with a very wide range of imported and local goods, provides never-ending pleasure and excitement to the shopper. With the steady return to normalcy combined with the glut of goods in Singapore shops, prices, too, have become reasonable and the discerning person finds herself well satisfied with the value she has got in return for her money.

Koviloor Acadamy

Let us, first of all, begin with Raffles Place, with its large departmental stores, imposing offices and banks, drapers, jewellers and restaurants—all of them staffed with English-speaking personnel.

At Robinson's, a leading departmental store with a wide range of predominately English goods tastefully laid out to gladden the eye, you can pick up anything from silver plate to chocolate. Here, too, is a fine selection of French perfumes. If you come from temperate climes and have become acutely conscious that your dark suit or long-sleeved dress is not quite the thing for the Singapore heat, you may invest in a smart cotton ready-made bearing a well-known English label. This store also has a smart beauty saloon on the second floor where well-trained operators will perm your hair in any one of the several different ways, including a 'cold' perm or a machineless one. You can also have your nails manicured and face 'done.'

Near Robinson's is G. C. de Silva, the jeweller. The show-cases are a delight, containing exquisite pieces of silverware, gleaming crystal and delicately wrought jewellery.

Across the central car park is John Little's, another leading departmental store, with an infinite variety of goods to meet all requirements. On the first floor is the dressing saloon with a European hairdresser ably assisted by charming attendants. Jamal permanent-waving is their speciality, but you can also have your hair shampooed, re-styled or set with attractive results.

If your tastes lie in books and magazines, visit Kelly & Walsh, also in Raffles Place. They have the latest in the book-world and do not confine their stocks to English books. The foreigner's needs are also looked after.

If your stock of make-up needs replenishing, the Federal Dispensary, next to Kelly & Walsh, will soon put that right. The Dispensary also has a wide range of medicines.

You cannot leave Raffles Place without visiting Gian Singh's and Bajaj Textiles, two big establishments that import gorgeous fabrics, from gaily-printed linens to exotic silks and jerseys. A word, also, about their Indian sarees. Gold-bordered and in lovely colours, they are just what the discerning woman wants for a strikingly unusual evening gown.

If you feel by this time that a step further without a cold drink will finish you, go into the Cold Storage Milk Bar and order one of their delicious icecreams or milk-shakes.

Koviloor Acadamy

In Raffles Place also are found the leading banks, doctors and lawyers so the Arcade, connecting Raffles Place with Collyer Quay, is always a hive of activity. There are barber' saloons to look after your tonsorial requirements, and many small stores selling all kinds of goods. A prominent sports-goods dealer from whom you can buy reasonably priced sports equipment, is King & Co. who also has a selection of toys.

Hungry for some lunch? There's the Savoy, at the end of the Arcade and facing Collyer Quay. The gourmet can make his choice from a long list of tasty dishes. An added attraction is a long stream-lined bar.

Another off-shoot of Raffles Place is Chulia Street, where you find the auctioneers and leading Chinese banks and business houses. An interesting street is Battery Road. If you are looking for elegant clothes, visit Maison Doucet. Mrs. "Tommy" Thomson, who runs the Maison, always has the latest models on display, be they two-piece linen suits, morning or afternoon dresses, exclusive evening gowns, many imported from London and America. Her exquisite costume jewellery, corsage flowers and belts are delightful. Those going to cooler climes will also find their requirements here.

And least the men feel out of this, H. B. Winter, in the same building as Doucet, have earned an enviable reputation for their meticulous tailoring. The faultlessly dressed man is invariably a client of Winter's.

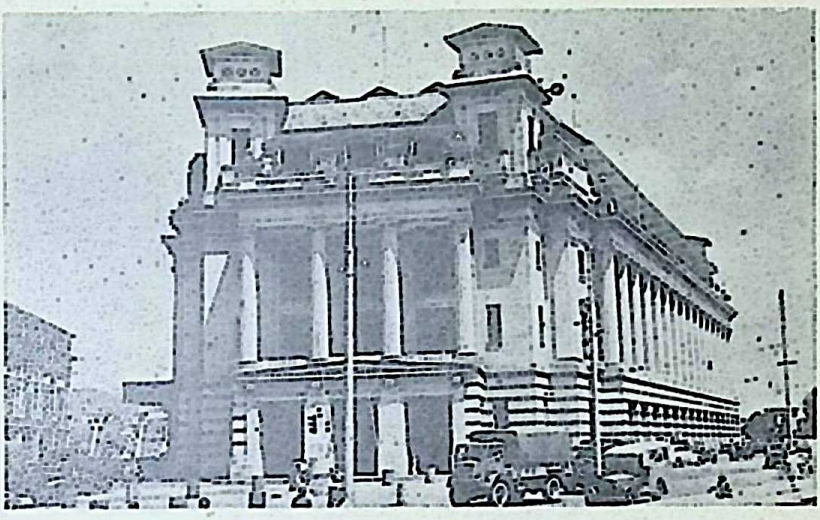
G. H. Cafe is an institution in Battery Road, and if you happen to be passing there at any time drop in for a bite or a drink. It is a popular rendezvous.

Another house, for that truly beautiful gown, is Elsie Mary, 13, Battery Road. From Elsie Mary's you can purchase classic models imported from European and American houses of repute, as a matter of fact, Elsie Mary can fit you in anything you may desire.

Are you a curio hunter? Let me tell you of a happy hunting ground just two doors away from G. H. It is a little Chinese shop—China Co.—whose show-cases are always filled with a variety of fascinating objects d'art. There are graceful Ming vases, carved ivory ornaments, fragile pieces of porcelain and delicately embroidered handkerchiefs and lingerie, and table linen that would make any lady's heart flutter. Their camphor wood chests, both decorative and useful, are an excellent investment any time. Even the small spender can find something both pretty and cheap to take away either as a memento or gift. They also have Nylon stockings, sheer as gossamer but durable, in all the latest shades.

Koviloor Acadamy

Whiteaways is another large departmental store that one must visit. Here are few of the many reasons. They will forward your orders for Australian food parcels to the U. K. All you do is to select your particular choice from the list of food parcels they offer you, pay your bill, give the required address and in due course you will have a grateful recipient writing you a note of thanks. Whiteaways also stocks lovely lingerie in their ladies department, and have a busy tailoring section.



FULLERTON BUILDING

Across from Whiteaways is Fullerton Building, which houses Government offices and the General Post Office. Do not forget to drop into the Malayan Arts and Crafts Society Store in the same building for that Malayan souvenir to take back with you. You can make your selection from the large stock of Kelantan silverware, and the jewellery, gold brocades, krises, woven mats and bags, and water colours of local scenes.

And now you are ready to cross Anderson Bridge, to drive past the clock-towered Town Hall into High Street, famous for its extravagantly filled drapers' establishments, its curio shops and jewellers, its stationers and news agents. And talking of jewellers, for those who want quality and distinction, B. P. de Silva's is the place to visit. Entrusted with the making of Princess Elizabeth's jewel casket, they can be trusted to fulfill your requirements, be they rings, bracelets, necklaces inlaid with precious stones, or gold and silver cigarette cases, crystal and silverware.

Koviloor Acadamy

Jean Simmons visited Wassiamull's when she was in Singapore, and so will you, for this store always has materials of an Arabian Night's loveliness on display, as well as handbags and accessories for the women, and smart shorts, ties and clothing for the men. Other well-known drapers' establishments are Chotirmall, Doulatram, Parmanand and Taj Mahal. It is a well known fact that reptile skins are much admired in Europe, especially crocodile skins, polished and fashioned into smart shoes and handbags. The Reptile Store, in High Street, stocks a good number of these. You can also find them in H. Hussain's Reptile House, on the farther end of the street.

O. S. Abdul Caffoor at 54, High Street, is sure to fascinate the shopper, not only for its beautiful array of jewellery, but for its collection of intriguing Birthday Stones.

This famous shopping centre has at least eight curio shops—in some you will find richly carved blackwood furniture, in others, vases that have all the poetry and grace of old Cathay. Meantime, do not overlook the fine workmanship to be found in their hand embroidered goods and silky-soft lingerie that would gladen even a princess.

It is now time for an ice-cold beer at Cafe de Luxe. This respite from the heat is made all the more comforting by the green of this popular cafe's walls.

The T.M.A. Music House, at the corner of High Street and North Bridge Road, has literally everything for the music-lover. It has a collection of gramaphone records, radios, radiograms, pianos, musical instruments, sheet music and music volumes.

A comprehensive shopping tour must include a visit to the Singapore Photo Supply, where you may buy the best cameras and spare parts, and all kinds of cinematic equipment.

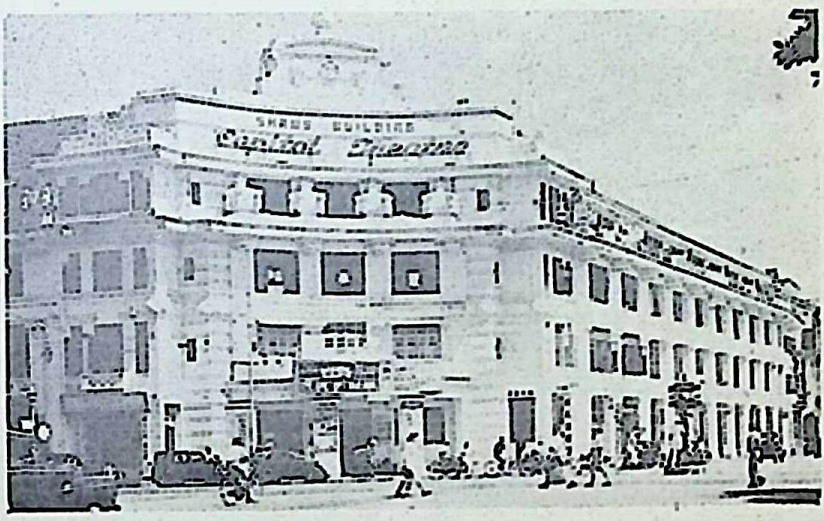
If you are looking for such as Life, Picture Post, Reader's Digest, Vogue and Esquire, step into High Street's Ensign Book Store or Mohamed Dulfakir's two flourishing book stores. Here, too, your stationery requirements will be met.

Before you turn into North Bridge Road from High Street, step across to Aurora's, where toys, cosmetics, perfumes, handbags and materials, to mention a few of the goods, are displayed at attractive prices.

Koviloor Acadamy

North Bridge Road is another treasure trove for Singapore shoppers, with such large Bombay merchant establishments as Chanrai's and well-known jewellers like Hendry's. There are so many beautiful things to see and admire that you will be tempted to dig deep into the purse. All this walking is wearing your shoes down, you complain, or doing the corns of your feet no good, well, Bata's, the big shoe firm in North Bridge Road has solutions for both. You can buy smart shoes there and at the same time have a chiropodist attend to your feet.

In Coleman Street is Mien Chong's, one of the tailoring concerns that serves the whims of the well-dressed male; and while in Coleman Street take full advantage of the dry cleaners, Polar Dry Cleaning and Asia. You may have ruined your best gown or suit with some hideous stain, or torn your dress in the crowd. Turn your worries over to the cleaners, they will do the rest. Dyeing is also undertaken. Go still further down North Bridge Road and turn left into Stamford Road that leads to Tanglin, the residential district of Singapore.



CAPITOL FLATS

At the corner of Stamford Road, on the ground floor of the Capitol Flats, you will find numerous Bombay shops with goods that appeal to tourists. The 'Old Capital and Ying's are Chinese shops you must not miss—the former has a wonderful array of Peking carpets in rich shades. Ying's has some lovely filigree jewellery inlaid with turquoise, coral, ivory or jade to suit your taste. Fermin and Rose are two dress shops which are very popular. Fermin also sells ladies' hats, many of which will not only protect you from the merciless sun but also serve as decorative head-pieces.

In Stamford Road you will find a photo studio that has built up a wide reputation for fine portraiture; it is the Studio de Luxe, in the windows of which you will see photographs of many of Singapore's lovely women. Here, too, you may have your films developed efficiently in 24 hours.

Even if Shroff's carpets cannot fly like the wonder in the Arabian Nights' tale, they have qualities that are very pleasing. Shroff's, by the way, is a big carpet store where you not only have your pick of gorgeous Indian carpets, but also have them packed and shipped for you to any destination.

Stamford Road continues into Orchard Road, a highway flanked by big automobile firms where you can purchase the latest American and English cars. Universal Cars, Federated Motors, Borneo Motors, Cycle and Carriage, and Wearne Bros. are among the agents of leading makes of cars and lorries.

Here's a tip for the thoughtful male. Daisy Flower Shop in Orchard Road will make up lovely boquets for you of either imported or local blooms: or orchids for the lady, may be, a spray of vanda joachim orchids. The price of these is not formidable as you may suppose, as these orchids flourish in Singapore.

You are bound to see a very smart glass shop-frontage with a wide array of delectable foodstuffs and tempting vegetables, it's Fitzpatrick's Food Supplies you're looking at. This food store sells all varieties of foodstuffs, frozen meat and also excellent local fish from Malayan waters. Fitzpatrick's has everything you may desire in your shopping basket.

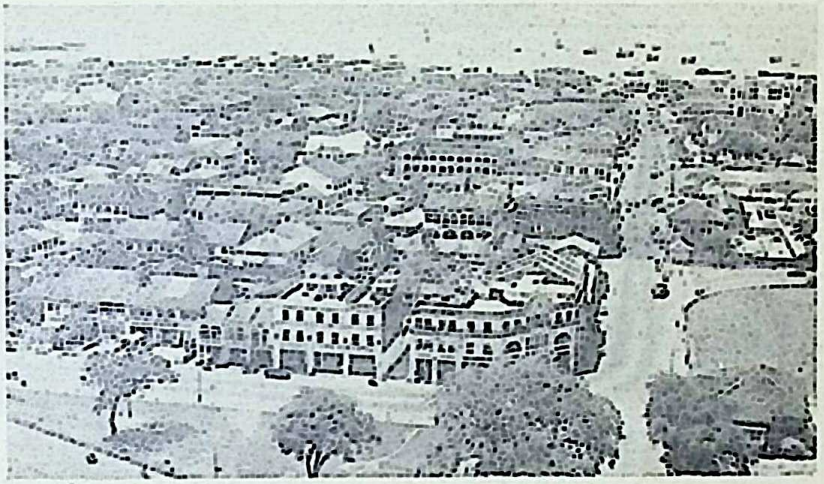
And while in Orchard Road visit the T C H Photo Service at number 163. This store not only developes and prints but sells photographic equipment, and is bound to satisfy your every want in that direction, especially, if your requirements are Gevaert.

The Singapore Cold Storage is a famous rendezvous for house-wives in the morning. Armed with shopping baskets, they pick their luncheons and dinners for the day from the well-stocked counters or from the freezing chamber, where succulent joints of lamb, mutton and beef are stored. Fresh butter and milk and Australian fruit are also stocked.

Koviloor Acadamy

Orchard Road is a long road, but you can relax at the end of it. The men, by a restful hour in the Botanical Gardens or at Prince's, and the women in a comfortable chair at the Cameo Beauty Saloon where American-trained hair stylists cut, set or perm your tresses with really wonderful results.

Now we take a trip to the seaward end of Bras Basah Road where Doris Geddes keeps The Little Shop. You will find the Little Shop interesting if you are on the look out for costume jewellery, dresses, gowns, gloves and hats.



BRAS BASAH ROAD FROM CATHAY BUILDING

In Bras Basah Road, too, is Mulchand's. These dressmakers specialise in sequin embroidery and intricate gown drapery that contribute subtly to the human-form-divine illusion. The tailoring of all their clothes is always expert.

Singapore boasts her own shoe centre in Middle Road. Here Chinese shoemakers fashion shoes by hand and to your individual measurement if need be. The shoes are smart and reasonably priced. This area is also the headquarters of the Zlin Shoe Co., Ltd., importers of Czechoslovakian footwear which have a popular appeal because of their smartness and durability.

If you have succumbed to the lure of Dorothy Lamour's sarongs and would like to have some of your own, go down to Arab Street in the Malay quarter of the town. Here you will find a line of little shops all selling a range of colourful Batik and plaid sarongs—the latter in purple and gold and other colour combinations, and the former patterned in exotic birds, flowers and fern. These sarongs can be made into striking frocks, or be used for decorative purposes. The shops also stock Malay slippers, some in velvet and gold kid and featuring the turned up toe, and others lavishly embroidered with beads.

In between these well-known shopping centres, you will find numerous other shops where many useful articles may be purchased. Bargaining in many of these establishments is an accepted thing, so don't let the crafy salesman get the better of you.

Doing the Rounds when the Sun's Down

Gay Singapore does not make it a point of dolling itself in white ties and well-pressed blacks except when occasion demands, so the new-comer need not feel he is being left out of the fun if he has left his formal wear behind.

Funning when the day's work is over goes on in various parts of the island so take your pick from the following:—

Internationally famous, Raffles Hotel has a spacious ballroom and a well-laid-out palm court. The orchestra, lead by Patrick Forbes, Britain's leading Hawaiian guitarist of B.B.C. and stage fame, provides the tunes for dancing.

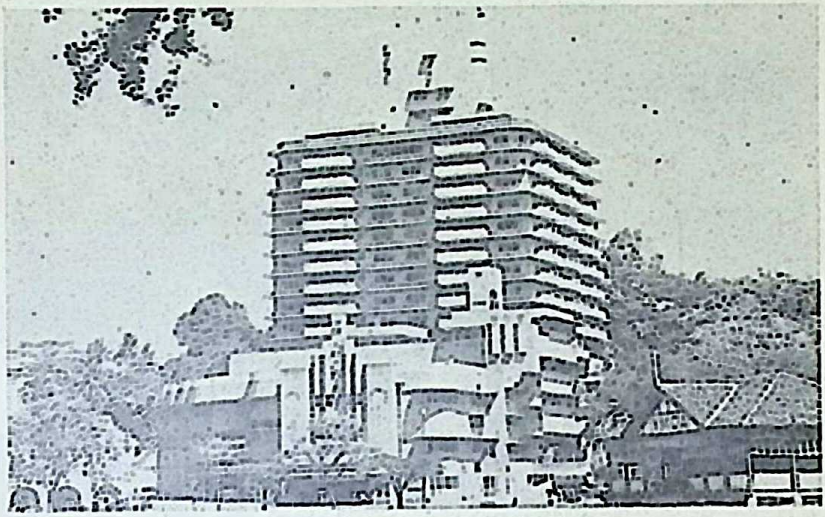
The Sea View, in Meyer Road, and fronting the sea, is cool and regularly sought by many. Its large domed ballroom and fine dance band add to the pleasures of its situation.

The Cathay Restaurant is one of the most sophisticated and beautifully designed rooms in the Eastern hemisphere. However hot and tiresome the climate of Singapore may appear to you, the Restaurant temperature remains pleasurably cool at 78°F. Here indeed, is refreshment pur sang: the revitalising air, the visual pleasures of the beautifully decorated and lighted room, the menus and wine lists, will all bring a sparkle to your eyes.

The Cathay Restaurant is the ideal place for luncheon after a long morning's shopping or sight-seeing, and it is an excellent meeting place for your friends as no one can miss the colossal Cathay building which dominates the City.

Koviloor Acadamy

Dancing to a first-class rhythm band on the specially sprung oval dance-floor beneath the soft glow of the rainbow lighting, assures an evening of unequalled delight.



CATHAY BUILDING

The Airport Hotel, in Kallang Road, the rendezvous of oyster and strawberry lovers. These delicacies are flown from Australia and served fresh. Roofgarden dancing and alfresco dining amid soft lights have contributed to make this a popular meeting place of the night-lifers. The lights have a happy knack of going out for quite long spells and on the roofgarden with only the stars overhead it is decidedly very pleasant.

Popular, sophisticated night and day spot on Orchard Road is Prince's Restaurant. The attractive decor, first class dance orchestra, and personal service give Prince's the intimate atmosphere which is an essential companion to the fine food served.

Also at Prince's is a popular English style bar, open all day, and a delightful tea-room, rendezvous of shoppers and tourists; and for the convenience of late-nighters grills and snacks are served at Prince's Grill until two in the morning.

The Cockpit, in Oxley Rise, is a night club with a marked continental flavour. It has an air of distinction all its own without being too formal. The menu cards are impressive and helpful and the eats and drinks are of the highest quality while quiet music for dancing is provided by a small band of musicians. Altogether a delightful spot to spend an evening.

Koviloor Acadamy

The Coconut Grove in Cuppage Road, is a large-house-turned-night-club type, where one can dine and wine. It has a restful palm garden.

The Lido, Pasir Panjang Road, festooned with little coloured lights blossoming on shubberies and trees, and mushroom lights on tables on the lawn, is an addition to the roundsman's recreational resources. The dance floor, snappy band and swimming pool and the European and Eastern foods make it popular.

For those who like to dispense with the formality of convention and just breeze around in slacks and open collar, the amusement parks should be their haunts. The New World in Jalan Besar, the Great World in Kim Seng Road and the Happy World in Geylang Road. Here, in the brightly-lit grounds, cosmopolitan Singapore funs.

BALLROOM OF NEW WORLD CABARET

Cabarets with taxi-dancers and lively bands; cinema halls, screening English and Chinese pictures; shooting galleries; games of chance for prizes; eating places and sundry goods stalls, will keep the visitor happily engrossed.

Chinese theatres staging historical plays to the accompaniment of cymbals, flutes and fiddles, are well worth a visit. Actresses and actors wear period costumes made of silk and brocades, and the reportoire now includes leg shows, acrobatics, and 'jazzed-up' dances.

Koviloor Acadamy

Malaya operas and dramatic plays are also performed on the many stages. The Malay dance—the ronggeng—is performed on open-air platforms. This dance calls for good balance, as one has to hop on one leg most of the time. The aim of the male is to get as close as possible to the girl without touching her and she, of course, tries to evade him.

A Cabaret with unusual fixings and decoration is the Southern Cabaret on the top floor of the Southern Hotel in Eu Tong Sen Street. Fantastic dragons and coloured glass give this night-spot an intriguing atmosphere.

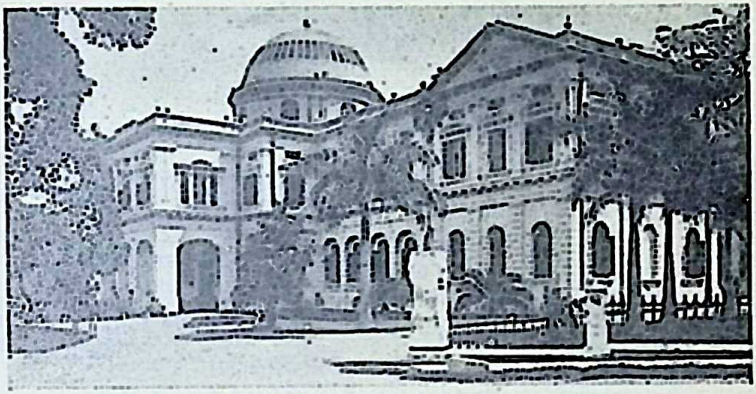
SIGHT-SEEING IN SINGAPORE

Among the places of interest in Singapore is the Victoria Memorial Hall, famous for its portrait gallery of past Malayan administrators. Built in the last century, plays and music recitals at the theatre, and occasional social functions and dances are held here.

A comprehensive history of Malayasia, its people and their customs, is contained within the Raffles Museum, on Stamford Road. On display are many ancient relics and tombstones of the East Indies, besides fine collections of Malayan arts and crafts and zoological specimens.



RAFFLES MUSEUM AND LIBRARY

Raffles Library, adjacent to the Museum, contains old manuscripts of great interest and a large collection of books. It has a public reading room complete with the latest books, periodicals and newspapers. The British Council has recently made a large donation of up-to-date books.

In the beautiful residential district of Tanglin, away from the noise of Singapore City, are the Botanic Gardens. Opened by Stamford Raffles in the last century, the Gardens, under expert supervision, now contain a large variety of tropical plant life.

It is well laid out and its winding paths take you over miniature bridges spanning streamlets, through gorgeous masses of blooming flowers to the water-lily lake teeming with multi-hued tropical fish.

A pleasant past-time is feeding the monkeys which, although free to roam in the jungle reserve, are friendly and show not the slightest fear for humans.

A stroll through a patch of virgin jungle in the Gardens, with its eerie sounds and gloom, is a memorable experience.

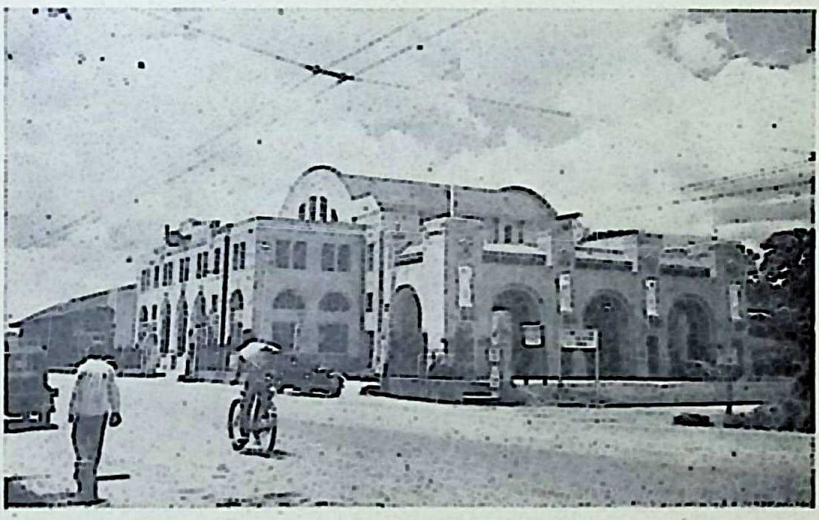
TRAVEL BY CAR

Agents of the leading travel services and hotels, who are to be met on board on arrival, may be safely entrusted with your luggage.

Singapore possesses a fine network of good roads and along the main routes run efficient bus services. The city is also well served by taxis. The leading taxi service—the Yellow Top Cab—is operated by the General Transport Company, Ltd., Tel. 5959, which guarantees efficient service and reasonable fares. The taxi-fare in Singapore is 40 cents a mile.

Trishaws, which have replaced rickshaws, are useful for short distances.

Opposite Wharf Gate 3 is one of the longest railway stations in the Far East. It is the southern terminal of the Malayan Railways. This line traverses the Peninsula as far north as Padang Besar, 580 miles away. From that point, the Siamese State Railways take you to Bangkok, capital of Siam.



RAILWAY STATION

Koviloor Acadamy

Colourful "cressonite" rubber tiles form the attractively designed floor of the Singapore Station's modern interior with its tall walls adorned with Malayan murals depicting the industries of the country.

Turning from Tanjong Pagar Road into Anson Road, one passes Boustead's Institute for seamen and the Marine Hostel, meeting place of seafaring folk.

In Robinson Road, after Anson Road, are the offices of Thomas Cook and Son Ltd., and the American Lloyd Agency, for your travel service. If you wish to send off telegrams, drop in at Cable and Wireless, a few doors away.

Through D'Almeida Street, the route leads into Raffles Square or Place, business heart of Singapore, where most of the leading banks, business firms, departmental stores and law firms are to be found in the large buildings that flank the four sides. Virtually all your needs are met in this square.

The American Express Company Inc. is located in Robinson's departmental store.

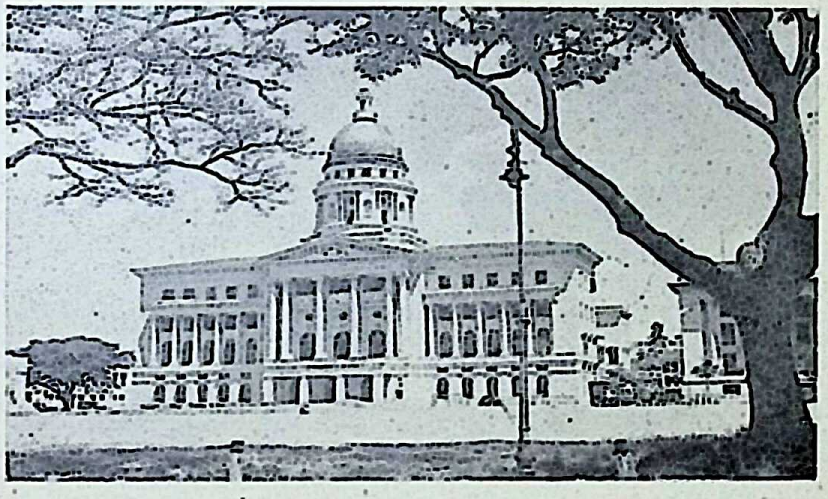
Scores of shipping and airline companies have their offices along Collyer Quay, which runs right off Robinson Road. Collyer Quay commands a good view of the Harbour, which is the seventh largest in the world. Clifford Pier, along the quay, handles the busy passenger traffic from small craft in the harbour.

MOUTH OF SINGAPORE RIVER

Koviloor Acadamy

From Raffles Place, on to Battery Road and past the imposing Fullerton Building, which contains the General Post Office and other Government Offices, and then over Anderson Bridge, under which flows the Singapore River, busy with its traffic of cargo craft carrying spices and other produce of the East to and from the warehouses on both banks of the river. In that area of Chinatown is concentrated a large part of the wealth of Singapore.

Empress Place lies over the bridge. Facing us stands the bronze statue of Stamford Raffles, founder and first Governor of Singapore. On his right are the Government Offices, and behind him is the Victoria Memorial Hall, with its clock tower. The Monument to Free Trade—Singapore is one of the few existing free trade ports—stands just over Anderson Bridge on your left.



SUPREME COURT

Proceeding to High Street we pass the Singapore Cricket Club, which faces the Padang—main playing field of the Colony, where cricket, football, rugby, hockey and tennis matches are held. On the other side of the Padang is the Singapore Recreation

Koviloor Acadamy

Club. On the left of the Cricket Club stands the stately Supreme Court, resembling the Capitol Building in Washington, and beside it the Municipal Building.

MUNICIPAL OFFICES AND SUPREME COURT

After High Street with its fine shops and jewellers, we cross North Bridge Road and, turning right, come to Hill Street with its huge Police Barracks and Fire Brigade headquarters. Turning left into Stamford Road, we arrive at Raffles Museum and Library, both of which merit a visit.

Behind the Museum is Fort Canning, the main garrison of 19th Century Singapore. The oldest cemetery on the island lies on one side of the hill. Many old residents lie buried there and the tomb of Iskander Shah, last ruler Singapore Island, is to be found there.

CENTRAL FIRE STATION

The Y.M.C.A. building is at the junction of Stamford and Orchard Roads. The Kempeitei (Japanese Secret Police) made this building their headquarters during the occupation of Singapore. Here, they incarcerated and tortured their political victims in specially built cells. The building has been renovated and its large membership, composed of local residents of all nationalities and many Servicemen, once again enjoys the many amenities offered.

From the Y.M.C.A. can be seen the modern box-like sky-scraper, the Cathay Building, owned by the Chinese multi-millionaire, Mr. Loke Wan Tho.

A part of the building is under requisition by the Government at present, being taken up as the offices of the Governor-General of Malaya, Radio Malaya, and other departments, while a proportion of the flats is used by Government staff.

It houses the Cathay Cinema and Cathay Restaurant.

Along Orchard Road, we pass by Government House Domain and thence into the leading residential area of Tanglin.

EMPRESS PLACE

To reach the East Coast of Singapore, start off from Empress Place (in front of the Victoria Memorial Hall) and take the route to the right along the Esplanade, past the Cenotaph and the Singapore Recreation Club into Beach Road.

First building on the left is Raffles Institution founded by Stamford Raffles, and then comes Raffles Hotel. Opposite the hotel is the Drill Hall of the Singapore Volunteer Force. Down by the boat-building areas of Singapore, Beach Road leads to Crawford Street, and right into Kallang Road, where the busy Kallang Airport is situated.

Turn right again to Mountbatten Road (named after Viscount Mountbatten who accepted the unconditional surrender of Singapore from the Japanese) past the pretty residential Grove Estate, through the Katong suburb and on to the East Coast Road.

This road runs along stretches of the seashore and then winds inland through native villages, suddenly into the gloom of a large rubber estate, out into the sunshine again over green hills and past the well-laid-out Changi Army and Air Force Barracks.

Koviloor Acadamy

EAST COAST ROAD

Changi Prison, convict goal of the Colony, is a grim building along the route to Changi Point.

Changi Point, the picnicers delight, is a long strip of sandy beach lapped by clean clear water. Jolly boats and refreshment stalls stud the area. Motor boats are available at the pier for trips to the lovely nearby islands of Pulau Ubin and Pulau Tekong Besar. On Tekong Besar were formerly the great guns that dominated the sea approaches to Singapore.

To reach the West Coast, take the Pasir Panjang Road leading into Bouna Vista Road, uphill to the "Gap," a vantage point where a splendid view is obtained of the Pasir Panjang hills, the sea and clusters of green islands, and unforgetable sunsets.

Leading north to the capital of the State of Johore, Johore Bahru, is Bukit Timah Road. Across the Johore Causeway, mile long link with the mainland of Malaya, we go across to the home of the internationally-known Sultan Ibrahim. In his impressive palace, the Istana Besar, is displayed his priceless collection of gold and jewels, rich tapestry, swords and banners of ceremony. The lavish banquet hall and spacious rooms with their collected wealth should not be missed.

Koviloor Acadamy

En route to Johore make a slight detour to MacRitchie and Peirce Reserviors—the city's source of water supply. Set in wild tropical, vegetation, visitors, especially photographers, will be treated to an experience.

FESTIVALS

Throughout the year the various communities celebrate their festivals with great showing and pomp. These days are usually holidays and as each one falls, the particular community celebrating puts up a show of splendour to the envy of the others.

The Indian Thiapusam festival, falling in January, is one the visitor will never forget. Men and women devotees filled with zeal can be seen supporting immense "kavedis" or religious platforms, through the streets while others with their backs pierced with thousands of needles, or with their cheeks skewered with silver arrows walk in religious ecstasy.

Hindus also celebrate their feast of Deepavali, in November, in which the famous fire-walking ceremonies take place in their temples.

Chinese New Year, in early February, is a most spectacular feast when thousands of Chinese, a naturally thrifty people, don their Sunday best, and abandon themselves to three days of eating and enjoyment. To greet in their new year, thousands of Chinese crackers are fired creating an awful din throughout the island.

On the Malay feast-days of Hari Raya Puasa and Hari Raya Haji, men and women in their traditional costumes and songkoks or caps, gaily walk the streets making their rounds of social visits or go to the Mosque.

During your stay in Singapore you may happen to witness a grand Chinese funeral procession wending its was through the streets. Unlike the sombre Western type of funeral, the Chinese one, usually preceded by brass bands, is invariably half-a-mile long. The bands can be heard playing tunes like, "Happy Days Are Here Again" and "The Skaters Waltz," a frightful discord, you no doubt think, but the bands are there only to provide noise to drive away evil spirits. The cortege, picturesque and highly decorated, follows slowly, dragged by a line of mourners. Chinese lute, fife and cymbal players trail along with the rest and add their quota to the general din.

Koviloor Acadamy

After the procession a huge feast is prepared and everybody sits down to a hearty meal. Needless to say, that only the very rich can afford such expensive funerals.

HARBOUR

A memorable scene spreads itself before the visitor as his ship, after weaving through emerald channels that divide islands lush with green vegetation, enters Singapore Harbour. Here lie ships flying the flags of all maritime nations.

Under the city's billion dollar skyline begin the wharves, which stretch for miles to the south-west.

The entrepot trade is vital to the economy of Singapore, which being the largest port in Malaya, serves a vast hinterland. Sea routes from Singapore radiate to all parts of the world.

CLIFFORD PIER

Thousands of ships pass through Singapore each year and, to cope with the vast amount of freight which is landed and stored in the godowns that line the wharves, the most modern handling equipment has been installed.

Singapore, too, has facilities for handling all kinds of ship repairs. Among the best known of the drydocks capable of accommodating large ships is the King's Dock.

Koviloor Acadamy

Lending colour to Singapore are the seamen of many nationalities who throng the streets, shopping areas and amusement places. Money changers and merchants reap a rich harvest from world-touring ships that halt at Singapore on their cruises.

BROADCASTING

From the Cathay Building, where the offices of Radio Malaya are situated, come the bright radio programmes to listeners in all parts of the island.

Through the Blue Network, which relays Malay and English programmes, Radio Malaya gives an interesting variety of musical shows, talks on topical subjects, plays and special features. Top personalities in the entertainment world such as, Lilli Kraus, John Gielgud, Jean Simmons, Muriel Steinbeck, Tommy Trinder, Solomon, Isobel Baillie, Eileen Joyce and others have broadcast from the studios of Radio Malaya.

Programmes, to suit all tastes, and full of entertainment, are put out in various Chinese and Indian dialects by the Chinese and Indian sections of Radio Malaya on the Red Network.

Schools Broadcasts, commencing at 10.55 a.m. have been a great help to a large number of schools throughout the Peninsula. Schools' programmes are radiated in three languages at the present time, English, Malay and Mandarin, and it is anticipated that programmes in the Indian languages will soon be on the air.

Radio Stations are to be found in most of the States of the Malayan Federation but these radiate on medium wave and although they relay some of the programmes from Singapore they are not powerful enough to put out programmes so that the Singapore station could relay them except the one at Kuala Lumpur. It is expected though that these will soon have the necessary transmitters to make possible an all-Malayan hook-up.

The Far Eastern Broadcasting Station which has its studios in Thomson Road, relays the B.B.C. for Far East listeners.

PEOPLE OF SINGAPORE

Singapore, which is 26 miles long and 14 miles wide, has one of the densest island populations in the world. Within the city and suburbs live, about a million people and the population is steadily growing, largely as a result of Chinese immigration.

Compared with the census in 1931, the population has increased by over 300,000, mainly due to the influx of refugees during the early part of the Pacific war and immigration since the liberation. This alarming growth in population has made it necessary to restrict immigration, which before 1931 was practically free.

In the Municipal area alone live 70 per cent. of the population.

In numerous parts of the town the population is about 1,000 to the acre. Shophouses and tenements, which line miles of the city, are overcrowded and frequently devoid of fresh air and sunlight. Housing has failed to keep up with the rapid growth of Singapore.

Population figures for the different communities are:—

Chinese	728,523
Malays	73,022
Indians	71,300
Eurasians	9,012
Europeans	8,790
Indonesians
Siamese and others ..	49,309

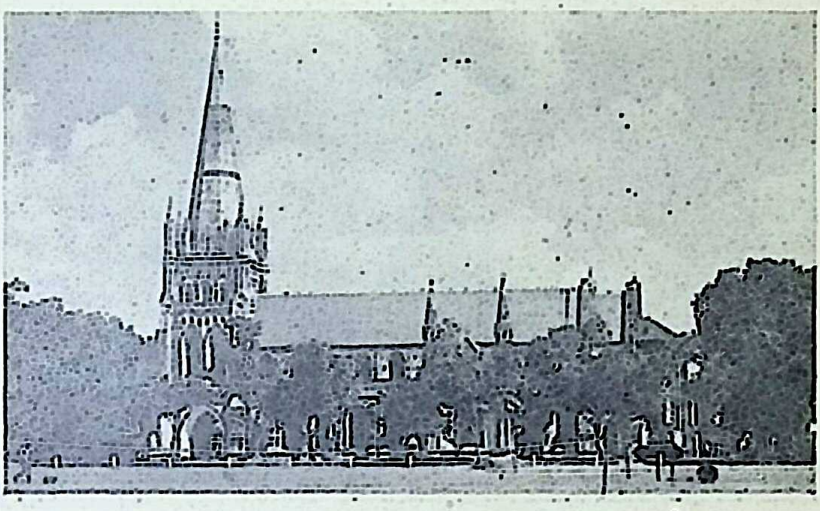
PLACES OF WORSHIP

A tour is not complete without a visit to some of the many places of worship to be found in Singapore for the divers religions of the different communities of the island.

Gothic in structure is St. Andrew's Cathedral, seat of the Church of England in the Colony. Built in the 18th Century with convict labour, the stately Cathedral in St. Andrew's Road presents an inspiring spectacle set amidst its fine grounds and age-old trees.



ST. ANDREW'S CATHEDRAL

The Roman Catholics of the Diocese of Malacca are served with a number of churches in Singapore, chief among those being the Cathedral of the Good Shepherd in Bras Basah Road.

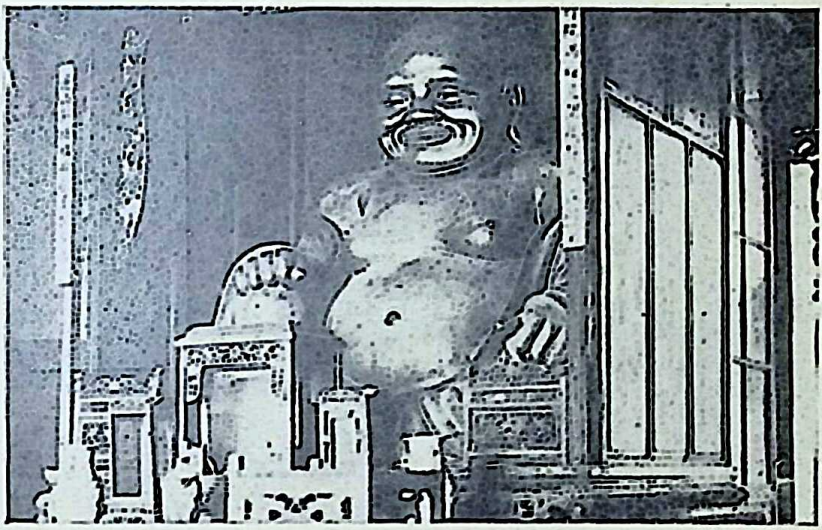
For the congregation of the Portuguese Mission is St. Joseph's Church, a tall imposing building in Victoria Street; and along Waterloo Street is the Church of St. Peter and St. Paul

Koviloor Acadamy

Methodists have their place of worship on the side of Fort Canning Hill, in Fort Canning Road, while Presbyterians possess an old established church, St. Andrew's, in Stamford Road.

There are Synagogues in Waterloo Street and Oxley Rise.

A magnificient Mohammedan Mosque of Moorish design and white slender minarets stands in the predominately Malay quarter of the city called Kampong Glam. From loudspeakers installed in the minarets issue the Imam's sonorous call to prayer. In Kampong Glam still live the decendants of the former Malay Rulers of Singapore. An old brick building, the Istana, behind the Mosque, was the seat of the Malay rule over the island.



INSIDE A CHINESE TEMPLE

Many ornate Hindu temples and shrines of Buddha are to be found in Chinatown along with temples of other denominations of picturesque Oriental design. Some of these temples are located in Temple Street, Hill Street, South Bridge Road, Kallang Road and Telok Ayer Street.

HINDU TEMPLE, SOUTH BRIDGE ROAD

SCHOOLS & COLLEGES

Over 10,000 children attend schools in Singapore, some of which are run by Government, while others are Government-aided (Religious) and some are private.

Free vernacular education is provided for Malay children. Main schools in Singapore are Raffles Institution, Beach Road, St. Joseph's Institution, Bras Basah Road, Convent of the Holy Infant Jesus, and Raffles Girls' School in Victoria Street, St. Anthony's Boys' School, Victoria Street, St. Andrew's School in Woodsville, and St. Patrick's School on the sea coast in Siglap.

Raffles College situated in the lovely Bukit Timah countryside is the seat of higher education in Arts and Science.

Koviloor Acadamy

In its spacious buildings of fine design is where most of Malaya's teachers graduate from, and many students leave the college to enrol in Government service or private enterprise.

The King Edward VII College of Medicine, Sepoy Lines. near the General Hospital, offers training for doctors and dentists.

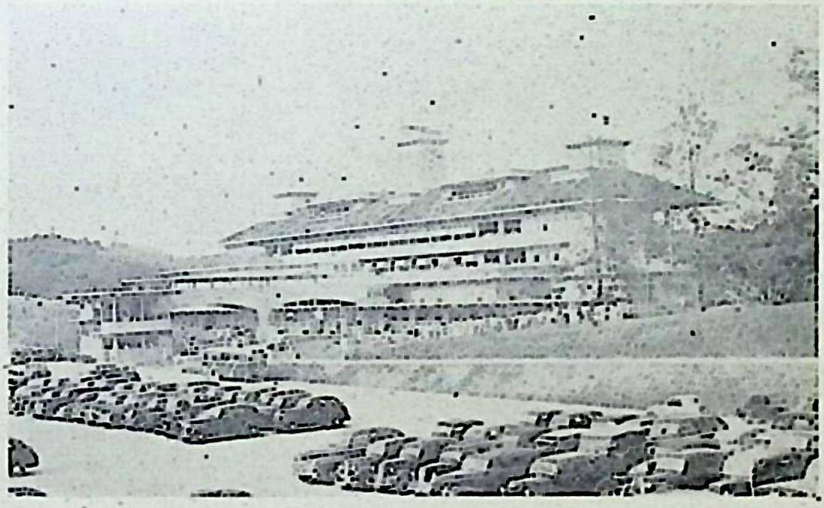
A site has been chosen in Johore Bahru, in the scenically beautiful area of Bukit Serene, for the Malayan University. Plans for this project are in hand.

ON RECREATION

The sport of kings, horse-racing, has thousands of followers in Singapore, the meetings being held on a magnificent course in the beautiful Bukit Timah countryside.

In two meetings held last year, punters spent over $2,500,000 on the totes and cash sweeps.

Race meetings are also held at Kuala Lumpur, Ipoh and Penang.



GRANDSTAND, SINGAPORE TURF CLUB

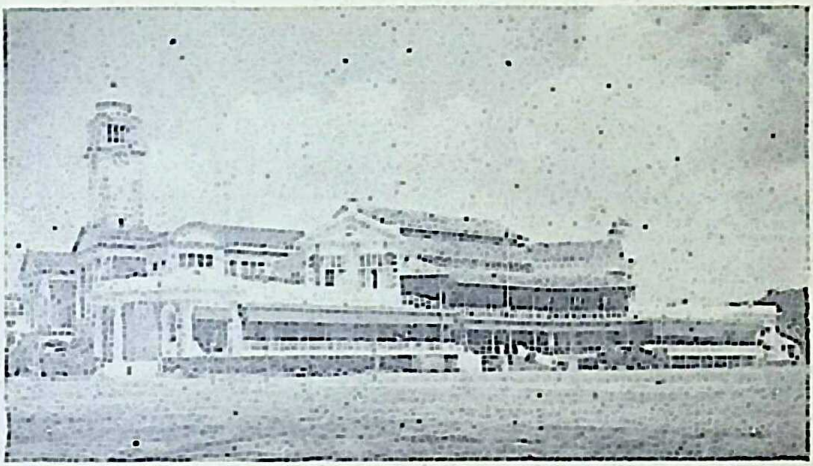
Koviloor Acadamy

Most popular of the many sports with large followings in Singapore is soccer. League matches for various challenge shields and cups are enthusiastically competed for among local teams.

The standard of soccer here is high, and several stars would certainly make their mark in big time soccer abroad.

Jalan Besar Stadium, Jalan Besar Road, is the main soccer ground.

Cricket is another popular sport with a large following and many an exciting "test" is played between the various sports clubs on the Padang.



SINGAPORE CRICKET CLUB

Golf is popular among the business and professional classes.

The Royal Singapore Golf Club, Sime Road, and the Island Club in Thomson Road have good greens.

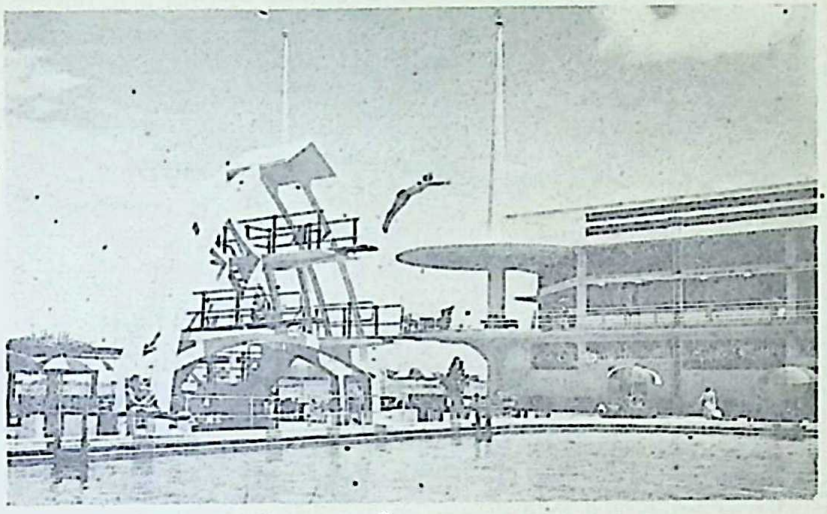
The Island Club is to be rebuilt to provide sports, social and cultural facilities for an international membership. Among its amenities will be a fine swimming pool.

The Royal Singapore Yacht Club holds frequent competitions, the races being held around the island and neighbouring waters. The Club is situated in Trafalgar Street.

Koviloor Acadamy

Flying enthusiasts are to be found in the Singapore Flying Club with its headquarters at the Civil Airport, Kallang.

Swimmers of Singapore and Penang rank among the best in the Far East. Swimmers in Singapore besides going to the various fine beaches on the East and West coasts of the island and club pools, frequent the public swimming pool at the Lido, in Pasir Panjang Road, which also provides meals, dancing and drinks.



SINGAPORE SWIMMING CLUB

One of the largest swimming pools in the Far East is at the Singapore Swimming Club, Tanjong Rhu. Housed in a large modern building of striking architectural design, the Club offers other amenities, including dancing in its commodious hall.

Another fine swimming pool is at the Chinese Swimming Club in Amber Road. Modern facilities can be enjoyed at this club, which also possesses a large swimming enclosure in the sea.

Tennis has a large following too and many indulge in this sport on club and public courts and on private lawns.

Hockey is a sport in which Singaporeans excel. The Malayan Hockey XI gave the Indian Olympic team one of their hardest games when they toured the Far East.

Koviloor Acadamy

Professional boxing and wrestling matches are held at the Happy World, Great World and New World in their large stadiums. These matches are invariably largely attended.

The standard of basket ball is pretty high but the game is played mainly by the Chinese.

Football, hockey, tennis and acquatics are by far the most popular, especially football, which draws excessive crowds.

For the first time in the history of the Island a representative was sent to the Olympics held this year at Wembley, and the choice fell to Lloyd Valberg, high jumper and track man.

Most of the communities on the island have their own sports clubs and these cater for the wants of their members. In addition to these there are sports organisations open to all nationalities, the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. and kindred bodies which provide sporting facilities for their members. In all Singapore is well served.

HARMONY OF LIVING

Visitors will be struck by the harmony that exists among the various communities of Singapore. There has not been a major disturbance or racial riot of a serious nature in the history of the colony.

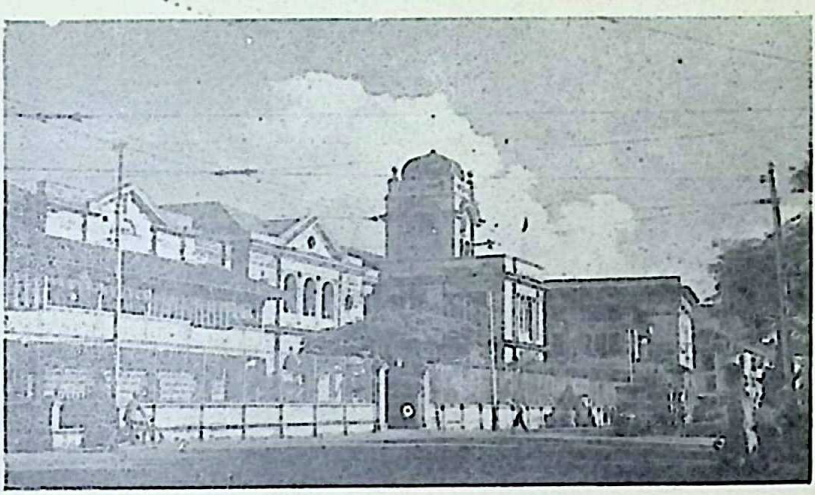
Among the commercial population, the Chinese predominate in most of the retail businesses and to them Singapore owes much of its prosperity. The Chinese labourer is a very hard-working person, and in business life, is a vital member to commerce, mainly trading with Indonesia, China, Hong Kong, Siam and Indo-China.

The Indian commercial community form an important section, dealing in consumer goods from Britain, America and India. The Indian labourer innured to the tropical heat seems to enjoy working in the sun. He performs outdoor tasks that even the hardy Chinese avoids, such as railroad and highway repairs.

Koviloor Acadamy

The classically inclined Malay is, generally speaking, a happy, care-free and courteous person. His inborn dignity and pride have prompted writers to call him a "Nature's Gentleman." The humbler Malays in Singapore are generally employed as chauffeurs, gardeners and fishermen—occupations in which they excel.

Blessed with fine physiques and imbued with a martial strain and strict sense of duty and discipline, thousands of Malays seem naturally to gravitate toward the Police Force and the Armed Services.



CENTRAL POLICE STATION

Europeans play a vital part in the business life of the Colony and in Government service.

Among the other communities, Arabs are found mostly in business, whilst the burly Sikh and Pathan are usually employed as night watchmen.

HOSPITALS

The hospitals in Singapore are staffed by an efficient force of local and overseas doctors and nurses.

Koviloor Acadamy

The General Hospital, Sepoy Lines, at the far end of New Bridge Road, consists of a number of large buildings that stand in pleasant grounds. The wards are clean and well-equipped.

Tan Tock Seng and Middleton Hospitals in Moulmein Road contain excellent medical facilities. The latter, for infectious cases, with its little cottage-wards neatly laid out gives one the impression of a holiday camp.

Kandang Kerbau Hospital, along Bukit Timah Road, deals mainly with maternity cases.

Along the East Coast Road, fronting the sea, is the Orthopædic Hospital. Mental and leper cases are dealt with in the hospital along the Yio Chu Kang Road. The lepers are of course separated from the mental cases and live in a little colony of their own.

There is also an extensive private practice on the island and private clinics are to be found in almost all quarters of the town and many in the surbubs.

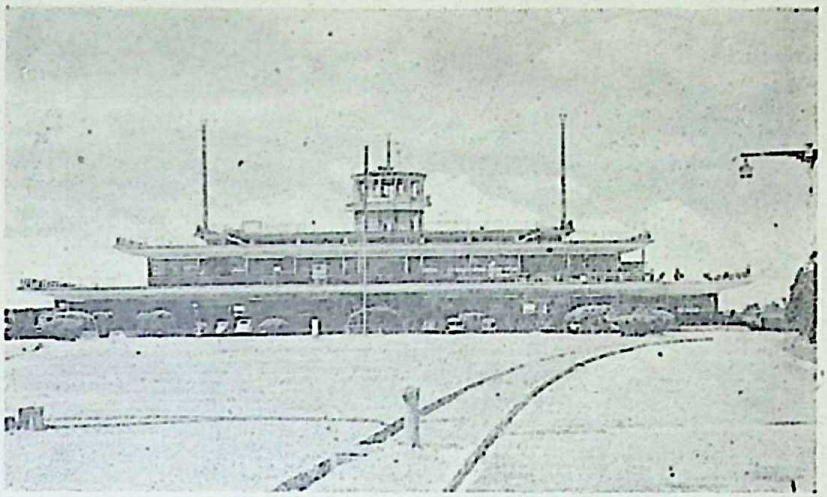
FACILITIES BY AIR & AIRPORTS

The strategic position of the island makes it a natural pivot for most of the air routes to Australia, to the Philippines and America, Indo-China, Hong Kong and the Netherlands East Indies.

Work is already under way at Changi on the construction of the most modern airfield in South East Asia, capable of accommodating the largest planes in the world. Meantime, existing landing facilities at Changi meet present requirements.

The Civil Airport at Kallang, meet the need of the civilian air traffic. Kallang Basin, half-a-mile away from the Terminal Building, serves as a bay for flying-boats.

Koviloor Acadamy



TERMINAL BUILDING AND HOTEL, KALLANG AIRPORT

Offices of the main airlines are established in the modern Terminal Building, which is topped with a control tower.

The building also contains an excellent lounge, restaurant and bar. Nightly alfresco dinners are served on the roofgarden, where dancing is also held.

Constellation aircraft use Tengah, R.A.F.-controlled airstrip, 12 miles out of town. They are the most modern planes to call at Singapore.

The two other airfields in Singapore, Seletar and Sembawang, are controlled by the Royal Air Force.

INDUSTRIES

Besides her entrepot trade, Singapore has a large number of industries which employ thousands of skilled and unskilled workers.

Rubber and tin, of course, take precedence and on the island of Pulau Brani, three miles off Clifford Pier, can be found one of the world's largest tin smelting works. The manufacture of rubber goods is also largely carried out but a greater proportion of the rubber is exported to countries abroad.

One of the largest rubber-goods manufacturing concerns is situated in the Pasir Panjang area where hoses to "cressonite tiles," and during the war, gas masks, are produced for local and foreign use.

Paint manufacture is another industry which is well established here. The largest factory is also on the Pasir Panjang Road on the west of the island.

Coconuts are found in abundance on the island and it is not surprising that copra, coconut oil and soap factories are numerous.

Groundnut and Red Palm nut oil and by-products of these are giving employment to many.

Pottery and brickmaking are going concerns and in the Pasir Panjang area, not far from the rubber-goods factory, can be viewed the kilns of one of the largest brickmaking companies.

Visitors to Singapore will notice, wherever they go, the slogan "Time for a Tiger." This advertises Malaya's own beer, brewed and bottled at the Malayan Breweries Ltd., under the brand of "Tiger Beer." The brewery is situated at Alexandra Road and was completed in 1932. It is considered to be one of the most modern in the world.

MALAYAN BREWERIES

The pineapple business is also a thriving one. The fruits are grown mainly in Johore and are sent by the lorry-load to Singapore where they are treated and canned.

An industry which is slowly taking shape is film making, at the moment confined to Malay films. These are shot at the Jalan Ampas studio.
